OKEECHOBEE – A man from Louisiana drowned while attending the Okeechobee Music & Arts Festival last weekend, the Okeechobee County Sheriff's Office said.

Investigators said a fellow festival attendee found the body of Steven Nguyen, of Baton Rouge, La., submerged in a body of water at about noon March 4 on the festival site. The festival takes place on the 600-acre Sunshine Grove property on Northwest 125th Street, which is northeast of the city of Okeechobee.

A friend of Nguyen told investigators the Louisiana man had last been seen the previous night at about 11 p.m. An age for Nguyen was not immediately available. Nguyen's death is being investigated as an accidental drowning and no foul play is suspected, the sheriff's office said.

"We are saddened by the passing of one OMF attendee this past weekend," festival organizers said in a statement posted on social media. "We send our deepest condolences to the individual's loved ones, friends, and all those impacted by this tragic loss."

The annual festival usually runs for four days at the beginning of March. This year's show was the sixth since the festival began in 2016.

DELRAY BEACH – Residents of the "Village by the Sea" will have much to consider on Tuesday's ballot, including two commission seats and two bond referendums.

The first bond question will ask Delray voters whether to approve a $100 million bond to pay for public-safety renovations and equipment. The second will ask them whether to sign off on a $20 million bond to pay for park improvements.

The public-safety bond, per city officials, would finance the cost of renovations to the police station on West Atlantic Avenue, the Ocean Rescue Headquarters on South Ocean Boulevard and four of the city's fire stations. Most of the bond – 80% – would go toward the police station.

Some residents have complained about the ambiguity of the questions.

"We weren't extremely specific, purposely, in the bond, because we want to have flexibility with what we're doing," Commissioner Juli Casale said of the
